PENDLETON BY SUNBRELLA® NOW AVAILABLE TO THE TRADE THROUGH PINDLER

The new Pendleton by Sunbrella® collection tells the story of those who walked the land before us, a sunset painting a colorful palette, and the mountain range creating texture underhand. The collection – whose story unfolds across the plains of American history – is now available to the trade through Pindler.

Pendleton by Sunbrella was born from the idea of bringing two heritage brands together, combining Pendleton Woolen Mills' distinct aesthetic and the enduring performance qualities of Sunbrella fabrics – easy care, fade proof, and bleach cleanable.

"Pendleton by Sunbrella allows for so many styling options, from traditional to contemporary and mountain retreats to coastal havens," said Esther Chang, senior designer for Glen Raven Custom Fabrics, the makers of Sunbrella. "Working alongside the Pendleton team to recreate classic Native American patterns was a refreshing and exciting experience, and we're so excited to see it come to life with the design trade."

Following a successful launch to the manufacturing trade at High Point Market this spring, the exclusive collection at Pindler includes 44 fabrics and is grounded by four hero patterns: Lahaina, Eagle Rock, Canyonlands and Zapotec. The hero patterns are supported by a range of textural solids and coordinating patterns.

Lahaina combines traditional tribal-influenced designs from the Hawaiian mainland with blue and turquoise representing the waves of the beaches near Lahaina, Maui. Outlined in a sawtooth design, the pattern evokes the power and challenges of the surf.

Named after a mountain summit in Apache County, Arizona, Eagle Rock incorporates Native American design elements and weaving traditions of the Southwest. The pattern features a defined center element highlighted against a solid background and reflected side motifs on a striped ground, exhibiting an artful sense of movement.

Inspired by Utah's tall pinnacles of rock that form breathtaking vistas along the skyline, Canyonlands uses a modern ombré weave to create rich layers that mimic the movement of sunlight dancing across the canyons.

Zapotec gets its name from the Zapotec Indians of Oaxaca, Mexico, who established a tradition of weaving colorful cloths using natural dyes from plants and animals. The pattern features classic geometric designs and elegant simplicity.

"Partnering with both Pendleton and Sunbrella is a designer's dream," said Elise Connor, director of design for Pindler. "We are very excited to present this collection to the design trade which combines two major design trends, the iconic designs from our American heritage and performance fabrics, both in high demand within the marketplace."
